They have the expertise, resources and most importantly the independence to make the hard decisions that are necessary in today's golf environment. A club run by a General Manager whose livelihood depends on satisfying a few members with outsized influence will always do the bidding of those individuals. We need a truly independent manager/organization that will work to satisfy all members and efficiently operate the club. Literally, HUNDREDS of clubs have partnered with the above organizations to ensure and enhance the experience at their facilities. The Delaire Board has demonstrated that they are not club managers. Often, we hear: "but they are just volunteers". That's exactly our point. Let's get the amateurs out, bring in the pros and let them have a go at it. Failure to consider these options is a disservice to the members.
